

Global Climate Change and Biodiversity

3 November 2010 Lectio Magistralis – by Professor Peter H. Raven. We inhabit a vibrant, living world, one inhabited by millions of kinds of other organisms that have historically initially created the environment of this living earth and continue to function collectively in such a way as to maintain those conditions and thus make our lives here possible.